

Professors in Sport Coaching

SHAPING OUR EXCELLENCE IN SPORT

As a result of significant growth in both student recruitment and research activity, we are investing in our academic leadership with up to 10 professorial appointments.

Applications are invited from ambitious candidates who will positively influence our vibrant academic community and have an established profile in, or related to Sport Coaching. Alternative appointments to Readerships will also be considered

We are also interested in applicants specialising in the following disciplines:

- Sport Business
- Sport & Exercise Science
- Physical Education
- Outdoor Education

Working across both the Carnegie School of Sport and the Research Institute for Sport, Physical Activity & Leisure (ISPAL), successful candidates will lead the development of research, teaching and enterprise. In return, we expect to support individuals in realising their high ambitions for personal development, therefore enhancing our international reputation for excellence across sport-related studies.

The Carnegie School of Sport, with its 80 year history, has built a strong reputation for teaching and research excellence within sport and physical education. The quality of this research is evident in the outstanding results achieved in the 2014 Research Excellence Framework, where we ranked 2nd nationally when accounting for research quality and the number of contributing staff.
